BARGAIN COUNTER PRICES FOR LIFE

Some mouths ago it will be remembered that a woman was seriously injured and a child killed at Wendling by a stump which was thrown through a house by a blast. It seems that the construction company was sued for damages in San Francisco and the following report of the case is taken from the San Francisco Examiner of Saturday. The extremely small amount of damages allowed probably indicates that the proximity of the United Railroads has served to greatly cheapen the estimated value of human life and that in future all personal damage suits should be tried in this county.

A jury in Hunt's court yesterday after having brought in a verdict for $150 increased the sum to $218 A S White of Wendling, Mendocino county, sued the Langtry Sharpe Construction company for $1,000 damages for injuries sustained by his wife when a blasted stump was hurled through the roof of his house, killing a child and knocking his wife to the floor. Under the law when the verdict is for less than $300 the plaintiff must pay the costs. Learning this the jury was about to again retire when the counsel for the defendant said he would agree to have the costs, which amounted to $68, added to the verdict. This the jury did.

Coast Man Disappears

On Monday evening, September 16, John Ericks left Point Arena about 8 o'clock for the electric light plant, where he had been working. Failing to put in an appearance, a search was instituted but up to this writing no traces have been found of him. Eriks had a weeks wages coming to him, and it is believed he lost his bearings and wandered into the woods.—Record.

New Manager For Telephone Office

J L Grantham of Oakland has accepted the position of manager of the telephone company in this city. He is an experienced telephone man and will have charge of all of the companies lines in the county. He has also won the appro ation of the subscribers by distributing new telephone directories this week. J T Walters, the former manager, was compelled to resign on account of illness in his family and has returned to Colorado.

ONE HUNDRED MEN WORKING ON GRADE

There is no longer any question as to the construction of the connecting link of railroad between Willits and camp five. Men are now working on the grade through Little Lake valley forty having arrived Tuesday which makes one hundred in all. A portion of the cutlet is low and swampy and will require a heavy fill. It is the purpose of the railroad company to get this fill in before the heavy winter rains commence and the time is rather limited.

What Ukiahites Eat

Jim Eddie brought down a fine bunch of beef cattle this week from the Lamb, Lierly and Spencer ranches in Potter. There were fifty head and they were disposed of to C P Smith. Ike and Pink Burke also disposed of some fine spring lambs to Smith and Wylie English and Leslie Crawford sold him their hogs. D Walker contributed a fine bunch of mutton to the market.

Returns From Arizona Mines

Bona Cleveland has returned from a two months visit to his son in Arizona. He also did some prospecting while there and reports having located several very promising claims. F T Cleveland is superintendant and T A Cox general manager of the Hibernia mine owned by the Arizona Pittsburg mining company.

NEW HOME FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL

Carpenters are at work on the addition to the Christian church building and it is expected that it will be completed during the coming month. The addition is 28 x 34 feet and will be cut into three rooms for the Sunday school classes. The young people. class will occupy a room in the new structure 28 x 34 feet. This room will be connected with the main auditorium of the church with sliding panels so that should the occasian demand the two rooms can be thrown into one and thus greatly increase the capacity of the church.

The two smaller rooms will be used for the primary classes. The old endeavor room that is now used by the young peoples class will be divided into two rooms. This arrangement will give the the church four additional rooms for the Sunday school classes. This addition will give the Christian church the largest and best appointed Sunday school rooms in this city.

Those who manifested so much interest in the contest and who contributed so liberally toward raising the $1400.00 which resulted from it and which is now being used for this work, will be pleased to know that the banner, which was the trophy won by victorious Ukiah, will have an opportunity of seeing it next Sunday, as it has just arrived and Sunday is "Banner Day."

Improvements at State Hospital

The contract for the immense steel water tank and tower that is to be erected at the Mendocino state hospital has been awarded to the Chicago Bridge & Iron Works of Chicago, the contract price being $8,000. The brick work on the female ward has been completed and the slate roof is now being put on. Steward Handy left for San Francisco yesterday to purchase more building material for completing the structure.

Entertains Youthful Friends

Master Loyd Bradford entertained a few of his young friends at the residence of his parents Tuesday afternoon. Light refreshment were served and the little ones report a very enjoyable time.

PETROLEUM STRUCK IN WILLITS WELL

The boring for oil at Willits is being rushed and the members of the company are very hopeful of striking a good flow. They are now down about a hundred feet and small quantities of oil have already been struck. While this oil is seepage and not in commercial quantities it is felt that it indicates a larger supply below. A good flow of fine water was struck at the depth of eighty feet but this has been cased off.

The fuel used is natural gas from a well a few yards distant. A large sheet iron tank has been erected and sunk about ten feet in the ground. The pressure of the gas was heavy enough to raise it over eight feet. From the tank the gas is piped to the fire box and the flow is sufficient to furnish steam for the engine. It burns with a blue flame and gives off an intense heat.

Gertie Jourden Married

Miss Gertie A. Jourden formerly of this city and David A Olsen of San Francisco were married in this city yesterday. It is reported that they will make their home in Los Angeles. Mr Olsen is also known here as he formerly made regular visits here in the interests of one of the large drug companies.

Mrs Alfred Anderson presented her husband with a fine baby girl last Friday evening.

Skeletons Unearthed By Canal Workmen

While digging the canal for the Snow Mountain Power and Irrigation company through the Busch ranch in Potter valley an ancient Indian burying ground was unearthed by the plows. It is just north of the old orchard and thirteen skeletons were taken out of the ditch. There are now two more sticking out of the side of the canal. The peculiarity is that no particular pains seems to have been taken in burying the corpses as the two that are sticking out of the bank are lying in opposite directions one pointing to the east and the other to the west.

The skeletons were of all sizes some being full grown males and others women. Some children's skeletons were also found. All of the skulls showed a full set of teeth in good preservation which indicates that dentists did not thrive in the land of the Pomos. The bones are apparently very old and crumble away after a short exposure to the atmosphere. Frank Toles of this city thought to preserve one of the skulls and dug it out and washed it off. It was a fine specimen bu crumbled to dust in his fingers just as he thought he was getting it in presentable shape.

The sides of the sloping mound of black dirt such as the Indians used to build over the resting place of their dead are still discernible in the soil which has since washed over it. The remains were buried on a gravel bar originally but the waters of Russian river have washed in soil during the past decades and the mound is now entirely covered. Another very peculiar thing is that there are no pesties or beads, implements of warfare or other relics such as are usually found in Indian burying places.

Unquestionably these skeletons represent some awful tragedy that happened before the coming of the white man. The way the remains are interred indicates that the indians were in a hurry and that the dead were the result of some massacre or possibly an epidemic that must have nearly wiped out the tribe. The canal of course only cut through the burying ground and there are undoubtly many more skeletons that have not yet been exposed.

The oldest Indians of the Pomo tribe have a tradition that may account for this peculiar find. It is that in the days before the whiteman came the Pomos were a peaceful nation and tilled the soil and made baskets and beads and blankets. They were surrounded by two warlike nations the Tartars and the Chimaras. One or the other of these nations was continually raiding the Pomos and stealing their ponies and squaws and they were finally driven from their hunting ground son Eel river and Sanhedrim by the Chimaras.

The Indians hunting grounds was one of his most valuable possessions and the wise chiefs of the Pomos relizing that it was useless for them to go into battle with the trained warriors decided to form an alliance with one of the warlike tribes. After many councils it was decided to hire the Tartars to massacre the Chimaras and so a bargain was fipally struck by which the Pomos were to pay one hundred ponies, numbrous baskets full of beads and blankets to the Tartars for restoring their hunting grounds and destroying their enemies.

The Tartar chief was also a clever fellow and had no idea of risking his warriors against such a formidable foe in open combat. He accordingly decided to accomplish by strategy with very little risk what otherwise might be a very dangerous undertaking. One night when the Chimaras were holding a ghost dance some of the Tartar warriors gained admittance to the dance in disguise. When the opportune moment arrived and the dancers were exausted the signal was given and the Tartars swooped down on their prey Only two of the Chimaras survived. It is thought that these skeletons may be the mute evidence of this awful massacre.

GEORGE DAVID IS NOT THE CORPSE

The relateves of George David were greatly relieved to learn this week that the man who had his neck broken by a Chicago dentist recently was not him. The newspaper description of the man fairly fitted David but his name was given as Davis. George has always had trouble with his teeth and they were afraid that it might be George who was dead. The Press set all doubts at rest by writing to the doctor who was called in the case and the following was received from him.

As to your letter of the 19th the body of George Davis was identified by friends and was shipped to Baltimore for interment.

Col Marks Appoints Acting Adjunct

Capt S A McDonald has resigned as adjutant on Col Marks staff and First Lieutenant Geo L Smith o Schaffner company has been appointed acting adjutant for the remainder of the term. Mc has been a faithful adjutant and is greatly interested in the wellfare of the regiment. He feels however that his long service entitles him to a rest and will therefore give the younger men a chance. Mc has always been one of the favorite officers with the boys and will still remain in the ranks as a past captain. Acting Adjutant Smith is an energetic young gentleman and is well versed in military discipline and his appointment is a good one.

CLEARING RIGHT OF AWAY OF TREES

The Northwestern Pacific has entered into a contract with the Pacific Lumber Co., for the latter to clear the redwood timber from the right of way of the railroad extension between Shively and Eel river. President A H Payson says that the right of way had all been secured and now it was the work of the loggers to clear it for the operations of the graders.

The railroad right of way runs through the Lumber company's domain for six and a half miles and four miles of this is a dense redwood forest, of large size, and of great value. The railroad pays the lumber company to cut the trees and allows them to keep all the timber.

Large Meteor Reported

Mr and Mrs Chas Underhill report that Saturday night a week ago while they were on their way to their home at Pine ridge the sky was suddenly illuminated by an immense meteor. It seemed to fall quite a distance to the east probably in the mountains as no report of it has yet been heard. The light frightened the horse and as it was the first meteor Mrs Underhill had every seen her nerves were also upset for awhile. It was about 8.30 in the evening and for several seconds it was as light as day.

Mr and Mrs Green Clark and Grover left this week for their home in Turlock.

WILLITS WILL BE DIVISION POINT

The Northwestern Redwood company has deeded the Northwestern Pacific railway company twenty-seven acres of land north of their present depot at Willits to be used for side tracks, repair shops, roundhouses, yards etc. It is understood that this settles the question of Willits being the division point on the through line. In addition to this the railway company has secured a strip two hundred feet wide through the Ole Simonson place for additional trackage for the yards.

The redwood company is to be congratulated on its enterprise and public spirit as through them has been secured a very valuable accession to the business interests of Willits. The large force of men that it will be necessary to employ in the shops will mean many thousands of dollars passing through the hands of the Willits merchants every year. It is understood that A W Fosrer, one of the largest owners in the redwood company and former president of the road is largely responsible for the action of the company as he spent last week at Willits. The land is a part of the old Willits estate and is very valuable for agricultural purposes and is valued at several hundred dollars an acre. Engineer Gorlinski and crew of surveyors are now surveying the property for the railroad people.

The Game Seasons

The open season for ducks commenced Tuesday. The open season for valley quail will commence on the 15th. According to the last legislature the deer season closed the first. It is rumored however that the bill was defective and that it will not hold and that therefore the season will not close until the 15th inst. This however is a debated question and one who wants to try it will probably have to stand a trial.

Prune Men Anxious

The prune growers are a little worried over the weather. The crop is fairly good and the price is better but it will be about ten days before they are through drying. The weather has been threatening and a rain would cause considerable losses.

CAR SHORTAGE IS CAUSING DELAYS

The shortage of cars is seriously hampering the cement sidewalk work. There has been very little cement in town for the past three weeks with the result that the sidewalk work has been lagging. The cement has been ordered but it is said that cars cannot be secured to ship it in. It is also stated that Lucas Bros warehouse is stored with stuff to be shipped but that the scarcity of cars makes this impossible.

Victims of Troubleitis

Sheriff Donoboe reports that he is still receiving new members to his social club three taking the first degree this week. George Reynolds, colored, was sent over from Westport for a thirty day course for indecent exposure; Jack Matson was pinched for trying to put down the booze traffic and given five days but only served one and paid out; J Raccomini was sent over from Fort Bragg to bide his time until the superior court takes up his case. He is charged with robery having been arrested for appropriating a few personal effects of another. Judge Whipple set his bail at $10,000 to bar accidents.

The Record Buck

Mr and Mrs B M Bucknell returned from Upperlake Wednesday. Bunt reports a great hunting trip and alleges that they killed the fattest buck of the season. He says that it cut an inch of fat on the shin bones.

DOES AND FAWNS EAT AN ORCHARD

EVD Paul is having a strenous time wtih the deer at his ranch south of this city. He admired the agile creatures and would not have objected to their prescence if it had not been for the fact that they insisted in dining off his orchard. Out of one thousand young fruit trees that he put out they have eaten up eight hundred and seventy-five. So bold did the does and fawns become that he was unable to drive them out of the orchard at all.

One old doe was so ravenous and persistent that he finally was compelled to kill her. He then entered a formal protest with the fish commissioners and explained to them that if they wanted their old deer they would have to take them and take care of them. The commission sent Commissioner Fairfield up and he visited the Paul ranch and reported that the condition was the worst he had ever seen in California.

Last Sunday morning he counted eleven deer in the orchard. He finally suggested that Paul put barbed wire fences around his trees and on figuring up the probable cost it was found that the wire would cost more than the ranch was worth. The commission has finally agreed to send out a delegation of game wardens to trap the does and fawns and they will then be shipped to some section where deer are not so plentiful and more appreciated.

Races At Fort Bragg

The Fort Bragg races which are to be held on the 17, 18, 19 of this month promise to be exceptionally good. Several fine strings of horses will be in attendance and the lovers of horseflesh will have abundant opportunity to excercise their judgment. The Press is in receipt of a season ticket from President Harry Mulsen and Secretary Ed Foushee.

A Record Bunch Of Grapes

Tom Finne is working for a record in grape business and was exibiting a bunch of grapes Monday that weighed a trifle over six pounds. They look similar to a Tokay but are said not to be by experts. Tom is unable to classify them but says they are exceptional bearers.

ROMER PURCHASED REGISTERED GOATS

L D Romer of El Robles has added to his small flock of angora goats having received forty-nine head this week from the herd of U S Grant of Oregon. Mr Grant is the prize angora breeder of that state and so Mr Romer has secured some very fine stock. To bring them to this city without loss or accident was quite a trick, but it was successfully done by S Leeth. Mr Leeth is entitled to much credit for his careful manner of handling them as it took just ten days to make the trip with several transfers on the way.

It is understood that it is Mr Romers intention to add to his flock from time to time, taking only the stock of the best breeders, his object being quality rather than numbers. The ranchers of the county seem more interested in sheep than in goats at present, but the Romer place is best adapted to the latter and if not a sheep man he does not intend to have the wool over his eyes when it comes to goats, even though only a new beginner in the sheep business. Anyone interested in angoras would do well to visit the Romer place where only the best pedigree registered stock is or will be kept.

Will Remain In Oakland

Attorney Cecil Dutton has decided to locate for the present at Oakland and will remain in the offices of Snook & Church, 906 Broadway.

his country, while she returned to Massapequa with the glad news that her father was acquitted.

Meantime a solitary figure remained in the library, pacing to and fro like a lost soul in purgatory. Mrs. Ryder had returned from the play and gone to bed, serenely oblivious of the drama in real life that had been enacted at home. The servants locked the house for the night, and still John Burkett Ryder walked the floor of his sanctum, and late into the small hours of the morning the watchman going his lonely rounds saw a light in the library and the restless figure of his employer sharply silhouetted against the white blinds.

For the first time in his life John Ryder realized that there was something in the world beyond self. He had seen with his own eyes the sacrifice a daughter will make for the father she loves, and he asked himself what manner of a man that father could be to inspire such devotion in his child. He probed into his own heart and conscience and reviewed his past career. He had been phenomenally successful, but he had not been happy. He had more money than he knew what to do with, but the pleasures of the domestic circle, which he saw other men enjoy, had been denied to him. Was he himself to blame? Had his insensate craving for gold and power led him to neglect those other things in life which contribute more truly to man's happiness? In other words, was his life a mistake? Yes, it was true what this girl charged—he had been merciless and unscrupulous in his dealings with his fellow man. It was true that hardly a dollar of his vast fortune had been honestly earned. It was true that it had been wrung from the people by fraud and trickery. He had craved for power, yet now he had tasted it, what a hollow joy it was, after all! The public hated and despised him. Even his so called friends and business associates toadied to him merely because they feared him. And this judge—this father he had persecuted and ruined—what a better man and citizen he was! How much more worthy of a child's love and of the esteem of the world!

What had Judge Rossmore done, after all, to deserve the frightful punishment the amalgamated interests had caused him to suffer? If he had blocked their game he had done only what his oath, his duty, commanded him to do. Such a girl as Shirley Rossmore could not have had any other kind of a father. Ah, if he had had such a daughter he might have been a better man, if only to win his child's respect and affection. John Ryder pondered long and deeply, and the more he ruminated the stronger the conviction grew upon him that the girl was right and he was wrong. Suddenly he looked at his watch. It was 1 o'clock. Roberts had told him that it would be an all night session and that a vote would probably not be taken until very late. He unhooked the telephone and, calling "central," asked for "long distance" and connection with Washington.

It was 7 o'clock when the maid entered Shirley's room with her breakfast, and she found its occupant up and dressed.

"Why, you haven't been to bed, miss!" exclaimed the girl, looking at the bed in the inner room, which seemed scarcely disturbed.

"No, Theresa, I—I couldn't sleep." Hastily pouring out a cup of tea, she added: "I must catch that 9 o'clock train to Washington. I didn't finish packing until nearly 3."

"Can I do anything for you, miss?" inquired the maid. Shirley was as popular with the servants as with the rest of the household.

"No," answered Shirley, "there are only a few things to go in my suit case. Will you please have a cab here in half an hour?"

The maid was about to go when she suddenly thought of something she had forgotten. She held out an envelope which she had left lying on the tray.

"Oh, miss, Mr. Jorkins said to give you this and master wanted to see you as soon as you had finished your breakfast."

Shirley tore open the envelope and took out the contents. It was a check, payable to her order for $5,000 and signed "John Burkett Ryder."

A deep flush covered the girl's face as she saw the money—a flush of annoyance rather than of pleasure. This man who had insulted her, who had wronged her father, who had driven her from his home, thought he could throw his gold at her and insolently send her her pay as one settles haughtily with a servant discharged for impertinence. She would have none of his money—the work she had done she would make him a present of. She replaced the check in the envelope and passed it back to Theresa.

"Give this to Mr. Ryder and tell him I cannot see him."

"But Mr. Ryder said"— insisted the girl.

"Please deliver my message as I give it," commanded Shirley with authority. "I cannot see Mr. Ryder."

The maid withdrew, but she had barely closed the door when it was opened again and Mrs. Ryder rushed in without knocking. She was all flustered with excitement and in such a hurry that she had not even stopped to arrange her toilet.

"My dear Miss Green," she gasped, "what's this I hear—going away suddenly without giving me warning?"

"I wasn't engaged by the month," replied Shirley dryly.

"I know, dear, I know. I was thinking of myself. I've grown so used to you—how shall I get on without you? No one understands me the way you do. Dear me! The whole house is upset. Mr. Ryder never went to bed at all last night. Jefferson is going away, too—forever, he threatens. If he hadn't come and woke me up to say goodby, I should never have known you intended to leave us. My boy's going—you're going—every one's deserting me!"

Mrs. Ryder was not accustomed to such prolonged flights of oratory, and she sank exhausted on a chair, her eyes filling with tears.

"Did they tell you who I am—the daughter of Judge Rossmore?" demanded Shirley.

It had been a shock to Mrs. Ryder that morning when Jefferson burst into his mother's room before she was up and acquainted her with the events of the previous evening. The news that the Miss Green whom she had grown to love was really the Miss Rossmore of whose relations with Jefferson her husband stood in such dread was far from affecting the financier's wife as it had Ryder himself. To the mother's simple and ingenuous mind, free from prejudice and ulterior motive, the girl's character was more important than her name, and certainly she could not blame her son for loving such a woman as Shirley. Of course, it was unfortunate for Jefferson that his father felt this bitterness toward Judge Rossmore, for she herself could hardly have wished for a more sympathetic daughter-in-law. She had not seen her husband since the previous evening at dinner, so was in complete ignorance as to what he thought of this new development, but the mother sighed as she thought how happy it would make her to see Jefferson happily married to the girl of his own choice, and in her heart she still entertained the hope that her husband would see it that way and thus prevent their son from leaving them as he threatened.

"That's not your fault, my dear," she replied, answering Shirley's question. "You are yourself, that's the main thing. You mustn't mind what Mr. Ryder says. Business and worry make him irritable at times. If you must go, of course you must; you are the best judge of that, but Jefferson wants to see you before you leave." She kissed Shirley in motherly fashion and added: "He has told me everything, dear. Nothing would make me happier than to see you become his wife. He's downstairs now waiting for me to tell him to come up."

"It's better that I should not see him," replied Shirley slowly and gravely. "I can only tell him what I have already told him. My father comes first. I have still a duty to perform."

"That's right, dear," answered Mrs. Ryder. "You're a good, noble girl, and I admire you all the more for it. I'll let Jefferson be his own advocate. You'll see him for my sake!"

She gave Shirley another affectionate embrace and left the room, while the girl proceeded with her final preparations for departure. Presently there was a quick, heavy step in the corridor outside and Jefferson appeared in the doorway. He stood there waiting for her to invite him in. She looked up and greeted him cordially, yet it was hardly the kind of reception he looked for or that he considered he had a right to expect. He advanced sulkily into the room.

"Mother said she had put everything right," he began. "I guess she was mistaken."

"Your mother does not understand, neither do you," she replied seriously. "Nothing can be put right until my father is restored to honor and position."

"But why should you punish me because my father fails to regard the matter as we do?" demanded Jefferson rebelliously.

"Why should I punish myself—why should we punish those nearest and dearest?" answered Shirley gently. "The victims of human injustice always suffer where their loved ones are tortured. Why are things as they are? I don't know. I know they are—that's all."

The young man strode nervously up and down the room, while she gazed listlessly out of the window, looking for the cab that was to carry her away from this house of disappointment. He pleaded with her:

"I have tried honorably and failed. You have tried honorably and failed. Isn't the sting of impotent failure enough to meet without striving against a hopeless love?" He approached her and said softly: "I love you, Shirley—don't drive me to desperation. Must I be punished because you have failed? It's unfair. The sins of the fathers should not be visited upon the children."

"But they are—it's the law," said Shirley, with resignation.

"The law?" he echoed.

"Yes, the law," insisted the girl; "man's law, not God's, the same unjust law that punishes my father—man's law which is put into the hands of the powerful of the earth to strike at the weak."

She sank into a chair and, covering up her face, wept bitterly. Between her sobs she cried brokenly:

"I believed in the power of love to soften your father's heart, I believed that with God's help I could bring him to see the truth. I believed that truth and love would make him see the light, but it hasn't. I stayed on and on, hoping against hope until the time has gone by and it's too late to save him—too late! What can I do now? My going to Washington is a forlorn hope, a last, miserable, forlorn hope, and in this hour, the darkest of all, you ask me to think of myself—my love, your love, your happiness, your future, my future! Ah, wouldn't it be sublime selfishness?"

Jefferson kneeled down beside the chair and, taking her hand in his, tried to reason with her and comfort her.

"Listen, Shirley," he said; "do not do something you will surely regret. You are punishing me not only because I have failed, but because you have failed too. It seems to me that if you believed it possible to accomplish so much, if you had so much faith—that you have lost your faith rather quickly. I believed in nothing, I had no faith, and yet I have not lost hope."

She shook her head and gently withdrew her hand.

"It is useless to insist, Jefferson. Until my father is cleared of this stain our lives—yours and mine—must lie apart."

Some one coughed, and, startled, they both looked up. Mr. Ryder had entered the room unobserved and stood watching them. Shirley immediately rose to her feet indignant, resenting this intrusion on her privacy after she had declined to receive the financier. Yet, she reflected quickly, how could she prevent it? He was at home, free to come and go as he pleased, but she was not compelled to remain in the same room with him. She picked up the few things that lay about and, with a contemptuous toss of her head, retreated into the inner apartment, leaving father and son alone together.

"Hum," grunted Ryder senior. "I rather thought I should find you here, but I didn't quite expect to find you on your knees—dragging our pride in the mud."

"That's where our pride ought to be," retorted Jefferson savagely. He felt in the humor to say anything, no matter what the consequences.

"So she has refused you again, eh?" said Ryder senior, with a grin.

"Yes," rejoined Jefferson, with growing irritation. "She objects to my family. I don't blame her."

The financier smiled grimly as he answered:

"Your family in general—me in particular, eh? I gleaned that much when I came in." He looked toward the door of the room in which Shirley had taken refuge, and, as if talking to himself, he added: "A curious girl with an inverted point of view; sees everything different to others. I want to see her before she goes."

He walked over to the door and raised his hand as if he were about to knock. Then he stopped as if he had changed his mind, and, turning toward his son, he demanded:

"Do you mean to say that she has done with you?"

"Yes," answered Jefferson bitterly.

"Finally?"

"Yes, finally—forever!"

"Does she mean it?" asked Ryder senior skeptically.

"Yes; she will not listen to me while her father is still in peril."

There was an expression of half amusement, half admiration, on the financier's face as he again turned toward the door.

"It's like her, just like her," he muttered.

He knocked boldly at the door.

"Who's there?" cried Shirley from within.

"It is I—Mr. Ryder. I wish to speak to you."

"I must beg you to excuse me," came the answer. "I cannot see you."

Jefferson interfered.

"Why do you want to add to the girl's misery? Don't you think she has suffered enough?"

"Do you know what she has done?" said Ryder, with pretended indigna-

"It is useless to insist, Jefferson."

tion. "She has insulted me grossly. I never was so humiliated in my life. She has returned the check I sent her last night in payment for her work on my biography. I mean to make her take that money. It's hers. She needs it. Her father's a beggar. She must take it back. It's only flaunting her contempt for me in my face, and I won't permit it."

"I don't think her object in refusing that money was to flaunt contempt in your face or in any way humiliate you," answered Jefferson. "She feels she has been sailing under false colors and desires to make some reparation."

It is necessary to hope, though hope should be always deluded, for hope itself is happiness, and its frustrations, however frequent, are yet less dreadful than its extinction.—Dr. Johnson.

Voting In the Senate.

Jefferson's Manual says: 1. When the yeas and nays are ordered, the names of senators shall be called alphabetically, and each senator shall without delay declare his assent or dissent to the question, unless excused by the senate, and no senator shall be permitted to vote after the division shall have been announced by the presiding officer, but may, for sufficient reasons, with unanimous consent, change or withdraw his vote. No motion to suspend this rule shall be in order, nor shall the presiding officer entertain any request to suspend it by unanimous request (section 41). 2. When a senator declines to vote on call of his name he shall be required to assign his reasons therefor, and, having assigned them, the presiding officer shall submit the question to the senate, "Shall the senator, for the reasons assigned by him, be excused from voting?" which shall be decided without debate, and these proceedings shall be held after the roll call and before the result is announced, and any further proceedings in reference thereto shall be after such announcement (sections 17 and 16).

A Fiery Speech.

William O'Brien in his "Recollections" gives this picture of Timothy Healy's first appearance in parliament: "A quarter of an hour after he took his seat as member for Wexford he started up to make his maiden speech—tiny of frame, sardonic of visage, his hands in his breeches pockets, as coolly insolent as a Parisian gamin, as entirely detestable as a small Diogenes, peering over the rims of his pincenez as from his tub, through bilious eyes over his contemptible audience—and horrified the house of commons with the following exordium: 'Mr. Speaker, if the noble marquis (Hartington) thinks he is going to bully us with his high and mighty Cavendish ways, all I can tell him is he will find himself knocked into a cocked hat in a jiffy, and we will have to put him to the necessity of wiping the blood of all the Cavendishes from his noble nose a good many times before he disposes of us.'"

A Singular Dream.

A singular dream is related in a well known British magazine. A woman suffering from anxiety caused by reduced circumstances dreamed that she went to church. "The people began to go out one by one. I looked around and inquired why they were leaving the church. They said: 'To look for the magic bird in the churchyard. You will always have luck if you find it.' I thought I would try to find it, went out and swept away the fallen leaves and found a speckled thrush, and as soon as I took it up it dropped £1 in my hand. The next morning I went into our back garden and there among the fallen leaves was the speckled thrush, which had just been killed by a cat. It was yet warm. I said, 'Here is the magic bird, and the money I know will come by post.' The hope was justified, for £1 came in the morning and a check from a friend in the evening."

The Unexpected.

A curious story is that of the late Colonel Harry McCalmont of the British army. He was a poor man when he went to the reading of his uncle's will, hoping that perhaps the departed might have remembered him to the extent of an old watch. True enough, the lawyer read out the words, "To my nephew, Harry McCalmont, I leave my watch and chain." The legatee was satisfied, and, leaning back, he drowsed, lulled by the monotonous tones of the lawyer as he read through the long instrument. At the close he arose to go. "I congratulate you," said the solicitor. "I don't know why you should," said the other. "You are residuary legatee," remarked the lawyer. "You will have £4,000 annually for the first five years from this date, and afterward you will inherit some £7,000,000."

Unlearned, but Wise.

"I'm after justice rather than law," said John Dudley, who for twenty-one years, from 1770 to 1791, was one of the most popular judges of New Hampshire. He was unlearned in the law, and his education was so defective that he could not write five consecutive sentences in correct English, yet so acceptably did he discharge his judicial duties that Chief Justice Parsons of Massachusetts, one of the most learned of lawyers, said of him, "We may smile at his law and ridicule his language, yet Dudley, take him all in all, was the greatest and best judge I ever knew in New Hampshire."

The Strain of the Glass Houses.

"The son of a glassblower is rarely found in the same employment," said a speaker at a child labor conference. "I would rather send my boys straight to hell than send them by way of the glass house," one glassblower is quoted as saying. It appears that the character of the men is greatly affected by the extreme heat and consequent physical strain of the glass houses.

Moved the Audience.

"Did you notice how I moved the audience last night?" asked the amateur elocutionist.

"Moved isn't the proper name for it," rejoined his critical friend. "It was little short of a stampede."

Comparatively.

Towne—Yes, my wife is able to dress on comparatively little money. Browne—Oh, come now! Comparatively little? Towne — I mean on little compared with what she thinks she ought to have.

Clear writers, like clear fountains, do not seem so deep as they are. The turbid look the most profound.—Landor.

To Keep from Growing Old

Here's the HORTON Galvanized Rotary Washer, which takes the washday droop out of your shoulders and the careworn lines of toil from around your eyes. You do not bend your back at all with this washer—which means you will keep your youth ten years longer. You do not grind violently on a crank or jerk at a handle. The flywheel of the HORTON Washer is balanced to swing VERY easily in a continuous direction. YOU DO NOT TURN FAST, you do not turn long, for the HORTON is high geared, so that an easy motion of the wheel produces an extremely high speed within the washer.

You need not be strong to handle the machine or carry it up cellar stairs. It is very light in weight, considering its strong construction, because the tub is of galvanized metal instead of wood—cannot dry out, leak or come apart, and keeps itself sweet and clean.

You will have to see this modern washer to appreciate what a blessing it is and how CLEAN it washes the clothes. The first time you are near a hardware store, ask them to show you the

HORTON

Galvanized Steel Rotary Washer

The Washer Made for This Climate and then you will realize what a modern washing machine can do. In justice to yourself, don't purchase any washer until you have compared it with the Horton. If you do this you won't want the other machine.

FT BROWN, Sept 29—To day I happened to visit several blacksmith shops in town and I would like to have seen such blacksmiths as Tom Charlton, Archie Layton and Heckendorf blind folded and led into the big shop I established on Feather river in '49. Their surprise and joy would have knew no bounds. The shop covered more than 10 acres and just think of that enormous bellows that spread over 3 acres just outside of the main shop. It taken 125 horses to blow it. In this enormous shop there was 100 blacksmiths. I was the head smith and often when I was welding big truck axles the sparks would shoot 9 and 10 miles and set big ranches on fire. In this enormous shop I was not continually confronted with the striker as they came around on horse back, would strike and go on. I taken 6 10 mule teams daily to haul off the cinders.

Just think of 100 smiths all pounding iron at once. There was something doing. We was not much for shoeing horses but still we had a special day for that purpose and we most generally shod 1000 head from sun to sun. I can very distinctly remember of Broncos jumping 60 feet high when I had started to nail and at one time I remember of having the shoe nailed on when he got back to the ground. As the country settled up the shooting stars became more dangerous and after a long hearing a law was finally passed prohibiting my shop from running any longer. So in order to get rid of my property I divided this shop into 50 small shops and sold them at auction. This hacking cough I now have started in that blacksmith shop one cold day in March and I have been spitting ice ever since. DR J C R MCCROSKEY.

We were sorry to learn of the accident of Frank McKee one of our young residents who left about a month since, with a youthful bride to reside in Bakersfield. Frank was working at the oil wells and the accident was caused by ever lifting, the exact nature of which we did not learn. Frst reports were doubtful as to the young man's life, later reports tell us no doubt of his recovery.

Not long since quite a discovery as we think was made on a portion of the Busch Ranch just back of the house and land owned by S H Busch, however Gus Busch and wife are living on the place and will show any person some of the bones and perfect skeletons of human remains that was unearthed by the ditch of the Power Co running through a portion of the ranch. We were informed not less than 20 to 25 skeletons were found as the ditch was being made and along its side can be found other skeletons and no doubt this is not all and the wonder is who the people were. All sized skulls have been found and skeletons in several positions and not a button left of clothing or a vestigage so far to show coffin or clothing as the Indians were the aborigines of this place and as they burned their dead the old ones have no idea who these people were and they located a spot where their dead were burned on the place and to prove the fact that their dead were burned one place was found where they had been burned. The skeletons are yet a mystery.

AMMUNITION MANUFACTURE

Exact Process Made Necessary by High Standards

In the manufacture of metallic cartridges the greatest care must be exercised to get them of exact size, both with respect to the shell and the bullet, and the proper charge of powder to get the best possible shooting must be determined by many tests and experiments, after which the loading must be done by such implements as will ensure the accurate measuring of the powder and seating of the bullets. So great has been the development of ammunition making, that the most accurate results in its use are demanded, and the manufacturer is obliged to use machinery that is absolutely unfailing in its many operations. The equipment of the Winchester Repeating Arms Co., of New Haven, Conn., is perfect in this respect, and this, coupled with their large experience and exact system of rigid inspections and tests enables them to produce ammunition that is known the world over for its reliable and accurate shooting. Winchester rifle and pistol cartridges are made in all calibers for all sorts of guns, each representing in itself a most exacting standard for that particular cartridge. The Winchester catalogue describes all these cartridges, as well as everything else made by this sterling company. It is mailed free upon request.

EARLY ARITHMETICS.

Next to penmanship the colonial school and schoolmaster took firm stand on "ciphering." "The Bible and figgers is what I want my boys to know," said the old farmer. I have examined with care a Wingate's Arithmetic which was used for over a century in the Winslow family in Massachusetts. The first edition was printed in 1620. It is certainly bewildering to a modern reader. "Pythagoras—His Table" is of course our multiplication table. Then come "The Rule of Three," "The Double Golden Rule," "The Rule of Fellowship," "The Rule of False," etc., ending with "a collection of pleasant and polite questions to exercise all the parts of vulgar arithmetick."

Wingate's Arithmetic and Hodder's Arithmetic were succeeded by Pike's Arithmetic. This had 363 rules to be committed to memory, and not an explanation was given of one of them. It is the most barren schoolbook I have ever read. These printed arithmetics were not in common use. Nearly all teachers had manuscript "sum books," from which the scholars copied page after page of "sums," too often without any explanation of the process, though there were also many and long rules, which helped the penmanship if they did not the mathematics. —Exchange.

BARBED WIRE.

A Lucky Device That Brought Millions to Its Inventor.

"The luckiest invention in history," said a patent official, "was that of barbed wire. It came about by accident.

"Isaac L. Ellwood was the inventor of barbed wire. In his youth he lived in De Kalb, Ill., and, having a neighbor whose pigs trespassed on his garden, he put up one day a wire fence of his own make. This fence had barbs and points on it. It was queer and ugly, but it kept out the pigs.

"It was a real barbed wire fence, the first in the world, and there were millions of money in it, but young Ellwood and his friends laughed at its freak appearance.

"One day two strangers saw this fence, perceived how well it kept out the pigs, realized how cheap it was—realized, in a word, its value—and ordered several tons of it from Ellwood. Furthermore, they contracted to sell for a term of years all the barbed wire he could produce.

"Ellwood borrowed $1,000 and set up a little factory. A few years later on he had paid back that loan and was worth a small matter of $15,000,000 besides."—New York Press.

The Water Lily.

Almost everybody has observed the strange characteristic of the water lily bud opening its petals at sunrise and closing them again at sunset. It was for this reason mainly that the ancients held the water lily sacred to the sun. Pliny says: "It is reported that in the Euphrates the flower of the lotus plunges into the water at night, remaining there till midnight and to such a depth that it cannot be reached with the hand. After midnight it begins gradually to rise, and as the sun rises above the horizon the flower also rises above the water, expands and raises itself some distance above the element in which it grows." It was also through this peculiarity that Hancarville proved that the Egyptians considered the lily an emblem of the world as it rose from the waters of the deep.

Scot Free.

The expression "scot free," which is in use every day, harks back to the times of Scottish romance and tragedy, so luminously described by Sir Walter Scott in "The Antiquary" and "Rob Roy." In these stirring tales we are told of one form of Scottish trials given certain offenders of justice. He who had broken the law was divested of all of his clothing and placed at a certain distance from archers who had bows and arrows ready, waiting the command, "Fire!" When the command was given, the man under indictment would begin running and the archers firing, and if in running this gantlet none of the arrows hit him he was allowed to go scot free.—Exchange.

A Real Genius.

From the composers of all time Beethoven stands out by himself like some gigantic tree towering up above the rest of the forest. He was the greatest genius of all, not for any one thing that he did, but because he was equally great in every style of music that he essayed. The first test of real genius is the ability to excel in all directions, and for this reason I have always looked upon Beethoven, Shakespeare and Turner as the three greatest geniuses who have ever existed.—Emil Sauer in Strand Magazine.

Just His Luck.

"Hello," said Borem, "I just thought I'd drop in on you today to"—

"I thought you would, too," interrupted Merchant.

"You did? Now, that's strange, because"—

"Not at all. This is the busiest day I've had for two weeks."—Catholic Standard and Times.

WHAT INDIANS SAY ABOUT SKELETONS

(SPECIAL TO THE PRESS)

The finding of the skeletons in Potter va ley on the Busch ranch has crated quite a little interest and the correspondent of the Press took the trouble to visit the place and also to interview some of the oldest indians in the valley with regard to them. Several well known indians who have relatives living who are over the hundred year mark were also interviewed and others who had received the story from their mothers long since passed to the happy hunting ground.

The few scattering indians in this valley are the remnants of the once powerful tribes that inhabited it. According to their folk lore a century ago the valley was populated by thousands of indians In Eden valley lived the Chimaras, on Eel river the Eel river tribe or Tantos and the Diggers. The town of Pomo was then the home of the Pomo indians. According to the indians there were many more indians in the valley in those days than there are white people now.

With tribal wars and pestilence however they became nearly extinct the few indians of today being the sole survivers. Those that died of disease were buried and different places through out the valley were designated as the buryingplaces. It is said that cholera and small pox was prevalent among the indians and at times was so bad that thousands died of it. At other times the dead was burned.

When questioned as to why there were no beads in the graves the indians replied that it was only of late years that the manufacture of beads had been taken up. They stated that the Eel river tribe buried the dead at the place where the skeletons were unearthed. This probably explains the presence of the skeletons.

The planing mill will be on the School street front of the lot and work will be commenced on the building immediately. The engine and boiler have already arrived and the other machinery is on the way.

Treasurer Johnson's Cash Account

The official count of the county funds Monday showed that Treasurer Johnson had $96,978 64 in the strong box. The receipts during the month were $10920.89 and the disursements were $32,093.82. The fees turned in during the month were: Sheriff Donohoe, $123.21; Auditor Mathews, $.50 Recorder Holbrook, $28.10; Clerk McCowen, $303.15. The following justices of the peace have also contributed: T L Young, $20 85; F Murray, $15.

Automobile Busine Pays

Walter Johnson has traded his Reo for a Columbia turnig car which carries five passengers. He returned to Fort Bragg yesterdaywith a couple of passengers and findsno trouble in getting all the businesshe wants and is making good mone. He spent Monday with his parents, Treasurer and Mrs Johnson of this city.

A SALARY MAKES JOBS DESIRABLE

The new law making the justice and constable jobs worth $50each a month has already started a lively interest in these once desp sed positions. Calpella is the first township on the scene desirous of having its full quota of officials. For years Frank Strong has been justice of the peace of Calpella township and has been unassisted by the services of a constable in maintaining the dignity of the law.

Now however since the job has arisen to the dignity of a salary several of the other residents of the valley have decided that Judge Strong has sacrificed enough of his valuable time in the interests of the community and are willing, nay, even anxious to relieve him of the onerous duties of the position. Before the salary was attached however the residents of the valley would not even accept the job after they had been elected to it. This can be proven by the case of Charles Reed who was elected justice at the last election and failed to qualify.

Of course it seems that an error was made in this case and that Chas had agreed to accept the job of constable. An error was made in the tickets or in the petition or somewhere and he was elected to judge instead. He would have stood for constable but for justice of the peace never. His failing to qualify left the job still in the hands of Judge Strong. As soon as it was found that the job was worth $50 a month it was also found that the board of supervisors had the right to appoint a judge to fill the vacancy that could be caused by Judge Strongs removal.

The petitions presented to the board for the appointment as justice of the peace were for F O Strong, T J Joslyn and Robert Chipps. The friends of William Finney and Charles Reed were anxious that they secure the constable appointment. Redwood valley is one of the quietest and most peaceful neighborhoods in the county and for years the residents have dwelt together in harmony. In fact even Judge Strong cannot remember back to the last case he tried. He insists however that some 4 years ago John Day, when in flight from the game wardens for having trespassed the game law, appeared before him and pleaded guilty and paid his fine. Some few years before he alleges that he married a couple, but it was so long ago that he has forgotten who.

It is probably true, however, that the close proximity of equal and exact justice to all, as the politician says, has deterred many a sinner from transgressing the sacred lin s of the law, and thus, while it has not taken much of Judge Strong's time, he has undoubtedly performed valuable services for the community.

The supervisors finally settled the matter by abolishing Calpella township and annexing the territory to Ukiah tonnship.

New Resident Is Well Satisfied

J S Waugh who recently purchased the Ukiah steam laundry is well satisfied with Ukiah and reports that he is surprised with the volume of business done here. He is only one of the many new residents who are satisfield that Ukiah is one of the finest places in the world to live and not only that but there is abundant chance here for a man not only to make a living but to save some money. There is no trouble about keeping people here after they have seen Ukiah. The only thing that is needed is a little advertising matter to set forth the opportunities of the city.

Secure Plumbing Contract

The firm of Donohoe and Ganter have secured the contract for doing the plumbing in the house of the new superintendent of the Albion company. Carl Ganter left this week to take charge of the work.

SIXTY THOUSAND LOANED TO BANKS

The new law permitting the county to loan its money on approved security to banks will bring this county $1500 in interest this year. The law provides a minimum rate of 2 per cent and the rate for this county was fixed at two and one half per cent by the auditor, treasurer and chairman of the board of supervisors. $60,000 is now loaned to the banks including applications that are now filed with Treasurer Johnson for $21,000.

Only state, county and municipal bonds are allowed to be deposited so that the county is absolutely safe. On these bonds the county is only permitted to loan ninety per cent of the fact value. The bonds must be approved by the district attorney and treasurer. The banks in this county that have made application for money under this law and the amounts they have received are: Bank of Ukiah, $18,000; Savings Bank of Mendocino county, $9 000; Bank of Willits, $12,000; applications from other banks on which the bonds have not yet been deposited, $21,000.

When the money is so loaned the treasurer is released from responsibility for the amount. While under this law there will hardly ever be $50,000 in the county treasury as the surplus money will be loaned out, Treasurer Johnson has not so far profited by it and is still furnishing bonds for $75,000. This is somewhat of an injustice as he is giving a surety bond and it costs him about $23.00, a month thereby making an enormous hole in his salary of $150 The bond was fixed by the board of supervisors being raised from $50,000 just before the last electian and the intention of the board was to pay to the premium on the bonds, and if they could have done so of course it would have made no difference to the treasurer.

MENDOCINO WOODS BEING RECOGNIZED

E A Morris, of Fort Bragg, has not only recognized the dormant wealth lying in the redwood burls of the coast but has started a plant in a small way for the manufacture of furniture from that variety of the redwood There is a growing and unfilled demand for this kind of furniture and it is not being made fast enough to meet local wants. We hear frequently said that there is no furniture made, birdseye maple, weathered oak, or the veneers, which equals in beauty that made from the burl of redwood.

J L Dodge, the barber, has made a number of exceedingly handsome articles, such as mirror and picture frames, parlor stand tables, etc. He has acquired the art of making an article which people buy readily at remunerative prices. And they want more of them—they cannot get them fast enough. It remains now for some one to take this business up and equip a plant right here in Mendocino and begin the manufacture of furniture and ornamental articles for the home from redwood burl The market is ready.

Scattered through the redwood forests are thousands of magnificent madrona, chestnut and tanbark oaks. These woods make magnificent furniture, superior in fact to anything commonly used for that purpose. The Union Lumber Company is making experiments with these woods to ascertain their worth as furniture woods.

THE FIRST COUNTY SURVEYOR DEAD

T P Smyth died at Greenwood Tuesday afternoon of pnemonia Deceased had been in failing health for some time and spent several weeks recently at the springs on the Gualala river in hope of recuperating, but he was little benefited by the outing and returned to Greenwood He was taken down with pnuemonia and his weakened constitution was unable to continue the struggle and he passed away October 1, 1907, says the Pt Arena Record.

Tom Pinckney Smyth was born in McDonald county, Missouri, on April 9, 1836. He came to Mendocino county in the early days and was identified with many enterprises that brought the county to its present position. He was a surveyor by profession and in 1861 was elected County Surveyor. This office he held for many years until he positively declined to further hold the position.

Deceased was an engineer of ability, and his work on this coast will stand as a monument to his memory. He has been in the employ of the L E White Lumber Company ever since the concern started the town of Greenwood. He surveyed and laid out all the railroads of that company, and the engineering skill displayed on the difficult road up Elk creek has received many words of commendation from those high up in the business.

In land matters, the deceased was one of the best informed in the county. He knew all the section lines and corners of every piece of timber land from Whitesboro to Gualala and has prepared an accurate map of the same.

Tom Smyth was a great reader and was well informed on all questions of the day. He disobeyed the biblical injunction, "It is not well for man to live alone," and never married. His father was a minister of the Gospel, and he leaves four sisters—one living in Oakland, two in San Joaquin valley and one in Arkansas. Mrs M E Featherton, of Oakland, arrived yesterday by stage to visit her brother, not hearing of his death until she reached Point Arena. Two nephews, T S and Ted Malone, of San Rafael, arrived here on yesterday's steamer and proceeded by private conveyance to Greenwood to attend the funeral.

Deceased was a member of the Maccabees and was buried under the auspices in Cuffeys Cove cemetery this afternoon.

This familiar face of Tom Smyth will be missed in Greenwood, but his big heartedness and kindly disposition will long be remembered by his large circle of acquaintances.

LAKE COUNTY BEAN CROP HARVESTED

E Mendenhall was over from Upper Lake Sunday and reports that he has closed his cannery for the season. He had an exceptionally good crop of beans this year and consequently a good run at the cannery. The beans are now being shipped through this city to the purchasers in San Francisco. So well and favorably has the Lake county string beans became known that Mr Mendenhall disposes of his crop every year before it is harvested and gets the top market price.

The crop this year amounted to 30,000 cases. Even this amount is insufficient to supply the demand. The harvesting and preparing of the string beans for canning requires a great amount of labor and therefore is the means of giving a great deal of work to families. It is about the same as hoppicking in this valley in this regard.
